Clippy, assume Skylab and the Apollo-Soyuz Test Project were canceled, and the remaining Saturn V and Saturn IB hardware was flown between Apollo 17 late in 1972 and the Space Shuttle in 1981. Assume that a previous flight to the Moon disqualifies an astronaut for a second flight. List the NASA astronauts that would have been selected for missions in this alternate timeline. #LZ

[Terminal Cruise] - Apollo-Sigma uses the Saturn 1B, which is capable of delivering 21,000 kg to LEO. The payload is a Centaur D-1T kick stage with a 10-foot hemispherical capsule for a two man crew. The mass of the Centaur D-1T is 15,320 kg (1,830 kg inert + 13,490 kg propellant) and the mass of the capsule is 5,200 kg. The Apollo-Sigma vehicle only requires potable water, oxygen, food, and electrical power for seven days. Once reaching the Cynthia station at Earth-Moon L1 the ship is placed on standby and the crew transfers to the station to use the station's life support. Total initial mass in LEO is 20,070 kg (well within Saturn 1B's capacity). Total final mass is 6,680 kg (capsule + dry Centaur). Centaur specific impulse is 444 seconds. Mission delta-v is about 4,800 m/s. Margin for error is about 350 m/s at Cynthia arrival. #01

[Terminal Cruise] - Miss Goodmile were previously known as the Havilah Harmonics. In 1961 they moved from Havilah on the Great Plains to a revitalized ghost town named Franklin in the Seattle area, where they discovered the joys of skiing. In 1962 they released Stampede, named for a Cascade mountain pass where they liked to hit the slopes. Some reviewers said the album was a gimmicky attempt to extend the surf music genre to the winter months, but the band members genuinely enjoyed their new hobby and this came out in the music. Miss Goodmile settled into a format for their albums that rarely changed. The first side of Stampede was structured like a typical symphony in pacing and theme. The first track (Break A Leg) set the theme with allegro tempo and laid out the stakes. The second track (Sit By My Fire) was a downtempo ballad, adiante. The third track (Red Hot On White Powder) was a scherzo that segued without pause into the extended sonata instrumental (Seven Humps).

For a human to visit another star system in his lifetime requires velocity change on the order of 20 percent that of light, twice, once to accelerate and a second time to stop. The Tsiolkovsky rocket equation says this isn't happening, not with fission thermal engines, which we've researched, and not even with fusion propulsion, which we haven't. The presence of interstellar hydrogen would require double shielding, one for the drive and one for the forward bulkhead, which over the span of the flight would become equally radioactive. Micrometeorites striking at $0.2c$ would be devastating, but they are statistically inevitable. A slower multi-generational star ship would have to be perfectly self-regenerating for centuries despite being much smaller than the scale of a planetary biosphere. Supplies and expertise to keep the ship in working order would have to be maintained for centuries in a dictatorship so absolute not one act of sabotage or terrorism or even a work slowdown could be permitted to succeed. #03

[Terminal Cruise] - The federally protected Aubry National Glasslands is named for François Xavier Aubry who (apart from Native Americans who roamed there from antiquity) first explored the area in the 1840s. It embraces 93,520 acres and lies in a rough ring around the rim of the Dole impact basin across three different states, embracing the geologically most interesting radius of the Dole meteor strewn field. The borders of this ring are conformed to rectangular section lines, as though it were a low resolution graphic of a fat circle. It is particularly rich in splash-form tektites created from the shales and sedimentary rock prevalent in the area. The area is a veritable museum of impact breccias. Layers of microtektites overlay the bedrock. There are impact glasses ranging from black to gray to green are evident on the surface. Access is by primitive gravel roads, but it remains public land. Typically, however, from November through May the natural glasses on the surface are typically hidden by snow. #04

[Terminal Cruise] - At the Dole impact complex the originating event opened fractures in the underlying crust causing deeper sources of magma to rise relatively near to the surface, resulting in a set of geothermal features similar to those found at Yellowstone and Thermopolis. The impacting bolide, estimated to have been approximately 120-150 feet in diameter, has never been recovered but surface fragments with sulfur content are widely evident. Many fumeroles, hot springs, and mud pots exist within the crater, but the most striking feature is a thick and persistent geothermal fog similar to what is found at the Gunnhver site in Iceland. The rim of the central crater serves to confine this fog, resulting in a micro-climate where the mean daily minimum from December through February hovers near freezing rather than 15 F found outside of the Dole system. Summers inside the crater are uncomfortably sticky and almost tropical, but not unbearably so, as the permanent fog greatly attenuates sunlight. #05

[Terminal Cruise] - Side two of Stampede opens with what the members of Miss Goodmile guessed would be the hit, Snow Bunny. On this and subsequent albums the fifth track was frequently also released as a 45 single with an unreleased track on the B side. In the case of the debut album the 45 featured the title cut Stampede (appearing as track six on the LP) with Downhill Fast on the B side. Track seven was a cover of the instrumental Mr. Moto by the Bel-Airs, and the album closed with Gone Skinn' evoking a joyous winter carnival atmosphere. The second side of other Miss Goodmile albums frequently had a similar structure, but actual sequencing changed based on what songs the publishers estimated would get more airplay or whether the cover track was vocal or instrumental. #06

[Terminal Cruise] - The Pison River begins in an underground pool of warm water in the center of the Dole impact complex and enters Lake Taijitu on the east side of the crater interior. The name of this lake suggests its Yin-Yang shape: there is a small round island in the widest portion. The lake overflows the lowest part of the rim and after penetrating a short winding gully cutting through the crater rim it meanders roughly east by northeast across the Great Plains and eventually becomes a string of isolated ponds in a twisting ravine some two hundred miles long. With the exception of one or two rainy weeks in spring and again in autumn the Pison River parallels the White through much of South Dakota but never quite reaches the Missouri River intact. The Pison is named from a mythical river in Genesis (using the KJV spelling) that has never been identified. The same passage also gave the name Havilah to the town that was platted out inside the crater along the west side beginning in 1866. #07

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, [Terminal Cruise] - In recitals at Angel Academy Rashiel Shybear played a double-bass standing on an end-pin which she had lengthened to be more comfortable. Sometimes at rehearsals she set down her bow and plucked the strings pizzicato with meandering bass lines while daydreaming she was a black cat slinking around at night. In 1961 when the Havilah Harmonics became Miss Goodmile Rash set aside her acoustic bass (which was always difficult to mic for concerts anyway) and picked up a Fender Precision electric bass, or P-Bass. The notes went through a spring reverb box so she could essentially duet with her own slapped-back notes. But the new electric bass took some getting used to. It lay horizontally across her chest, supported with a shoulder strap, which allowed her to get out of her seat and dance around the stage. Not that it helped her visibility very much. The bass player was absolutely crucial to any band's sound but typically ignored. Rashiel was confident enough to sing backup but never solo. #08

[Terminal Cruise] - Rashiel's human brother is Cadence "Coyote Cub" Shybear, a Kuwapi youth. In Lakota Kuwapi means "The Left Behind Ones". They were a small band of Oglala discontents who thrived in Havilah when the people from nearby tribes, including the Oglala mainline, moved to reservations as barbed wire decimated the herds crucial to their way of life. At Angel Academy and in the Havilah Harmonics Cubby played saxophone. After the band changed their name to Miss Goodmile Cubby began to play a 1951 custom Fender Broadcaster with no model name displayed on the head stock due to a trademark scuffle. Today some collectors call it a Nocaster. The Lord of Hosts Fellowship retained a virulent racism that has been endemic in the church since Havilah was founded in 1866. Cubby's marriage to Remiel Zinter in open defiance of the customs of the church brought the ugly rot within the church to the surface with bloody results. #09

[Terminal Cruise] - Dole Crater was identified as an complex impact structure in the 1870s and later dated to about 1.6 million years of age. The crater rim rises to a mean 250 feet above the slightly depressed crater floor and 220 feet above the surrounding plains. Migdalel Butte ("Tower of God") at 370 feet is the remnant of a central splash-back peak, one of the few clear examples of such on Earth, and only the second found in North America. Of the four rivers flowing from the Garden in Eden Gen. 2:11 reads, The name of the first is Pison: that is it which compasseth the whole land of Havilah, where there is gold. There was never real gold in modern Havilah, but always much fools gold. The impacting bolide was the origin of much ejecta in the form of iron pyrites. However, compression and fractures in the underlying bedrock accessed a source of natural gas that became important for the economy of Havilah in early 20th Century and justified a rail spur that remains the primary means to access the town. [Terminal Cruise] - Dr. Miriam Wahkan (Lakota: Much Practice) is Raphael Haivri. In the First Century CE she unobtrusively performed the healings the gospel writers attributed to Ravi Yeshua. Today she is the sole doctor in Havilah, a town of some 1,100 people, which by all rights should have several more physicians. Her body's molecular machines (which she drolly calls "veterinary primer") are produced in superabundance. This permits her to quickly knit fractures and close wounds, but she cannot give others a share in her unending life. Raphael is frequently seen at the Migdalel College clinic wearing a white lab coat over her draped red wings, chiefly to provide convenient pockets. As with other VV-allosomed elyonoth Dr. Wahkan is rather tall, which inspired Yeshua to call her The Tower (Maryam Migdal) when she was his chief female disciple. Yeshua drew many women to his ministry and in that culture females being baptized and given new raiment by someone like Rocky Shimon (Peter) simply would not do. #0B

On Saturday evenings at 8 pm GenMat aired a half-hour program called Angel Academy using a three camera setup and 35mm film, but no live audience. Each episode had twenty-three minutes of content, starting with a one minute thirty second cold open. The title theme and credits and sponsor billboard followed for one minute. Act 1 was eight minutes. The first commercial break was two minutes. Act 2 was eight minutes thirty seconds. The second commercial break was another two minutes. Act 3 wrapped things up in 5 minutes. This was followed by the end credits and a sponsor plug lasting one minute thirty seconds, then a half minute network ID and promotion of the next week's episode. The total running time for non-content was seven minutes. #OC

[Terminal Cruise] - Angels are baseline humans with a V chromosome (a modified X chromosome) that gives them feathered wings and access to store acquired memories with their inactive doppelganger bot in the Pleroma, permitting their consciousness to continue in that virtual reality without interruption in the event of their death. The V chromosome also gives angels the ability to summon one end of an Einstein-Rosen bridge, a "halo" in the form of a transparent sphere that encases their body. Michelle Renee Haivri (historically identified with Michael) is able to summon both a source and a destination portal and simply walk to Hell, or from Hell to anywhere on Earth. Yishmael is able to cast the portal at a remove from his body and use it to alter the path of incoming projectiles, for example, or retrieve distant objects. All others with the V chromosome use their halo to be subjected to Earth's gravity as a inverse cube law rather than an inverse square law, thus making their wings effective for flight. #0D

[Terminal Cruise] - Vrieti Haivri, "Running Star", is swift of foot and accesses the Pleroma to obtain historical information. She is an archaeologist who literally knows where all the skeletons are buried. As the Scribe of God she keeps a complete record of the alterations in the timeline made by House Haivri as a set of scrolls bearing the written copy of the growing Shir ha-Zikaron, the Song of Remembrance. The surface of these scrolls is just three molecules thick, with two transparent layers and a third layer in the middle that is abnormally white. No ink or soil or blood can mark this layer, only light in the X-ray band that comes from a pen possessed by Vrieti alone. The latest uncompleted scroll lies open on the Table of the Lord in Temple Derekh Me'hudeshet (the Way Restored) in Havilah. Modern Assyriologists would give anything to examine this songbook. Among many things it contains lines of Paleo-Hebrew abjad dating from the period of the Omride dynasty of Shomron in the 9th Century BCE. #0E

[Terminal Cruise] - Now let's turn to the Soviet space program, and consider the Proton rocket configured with a Blok-D upper stage with a fission thermal engine. We'll call it Blok-N. The direct Soviet counterpart to the NERVA flight engine was the RD-0410. Thrust=35.3 kN. Dry mass=2,000 kg Specific impulse= 910 s. This engine is lighter than the American 75K NERVA and even more efficient, though it has much lower thrust. The Proton/Blok-N configuration was used in a series of launches to construct a space station called Zarya ("Dawn") at the Earth-Moon L-4 Lagrange point. After reaching L-4, the Blok-N upper stage would circle behind the Earth through L3 and reach L-5, where it would be safely parked to be reutilized at a future date as an orbital tug. No manned missions would utilize the Blok-N stage due to radiation hazards. #0Z

[Terminal Cruise] - Hell exists within an anti-deSitter "pocket universe" with a negative hyperbolic (Lobachevskian) geometry rather than the positive Riemannian curvature of our universe. This inverts the operation of gravity, such that the inhabitants of Hell walk feet outward on the inside surface of a hollow sphere with a total of 5 million square miles of area. The stars of our universe are never visible from Hell, as the land wraps around to become the sky. Light and heat are supplied by the Lake of Fire, which waxes and wanes to provide day-night cycles and seasons. Star systems in the Continuity are accessible by portals found at the twenty-one temples of Hell. The temple of El Elyon on the Anshar plateau links to AN underground pool at Havilah in North America. #OF

Joining his team was six hundred aircraft and one hundred forty-four tanks led by Col. George S. Patton Jr, who would grow even more famous in the bigger war to come. Three thousand pieces of field artillery unleashed by the Entente side and countless bombs dropped from the air tore the landscape at St.-Mihiel into a pock-marked pigsty filled with mud. Erik took two agonizing rounds from a Bergmann Maschinenpistole 18/1 that shattered the bone in his upper left arm. Doctors removed the bullets but the surgery was performed in less-than-ideal conditions. He developed gas gangrene while recuperating in the field hospital so his arm had to come off. #OG

[Terminal Cruise] - Erik came home from the war with a bonus of sixty dollars and took a job in Havilah painting houses using his remaining arm. He laid his extra money aside for a wedding. In 1920 Erik took to the Yellowstone Auto Trail in a Model T and drove halfway across the country. Maryland had no law against cousins getting hitched. Both of Clara's parents thought Erik was a great kid so they wholeheartedly gave their blessing. But Erik's own parents in Havilah were a much harder sell. Back home Erik instantly became the black sheep of the extended Zinter family for passing over a perfectly good (but horsefaced) local first cousin for an admittedly beautiful second cousin from back east. One of his aunts said, "Why, any heathen could do as much!" In the economically frothy decade that followed even Clara found work. But by 1932 what builders there still remained found new applicants with two good arms suddenly willing to paint and Erik just wasn't able to compete with that. #OI

[Terminal Cruise] - Erik and Clara Zinter were blessed with a son, Samuel, in 1925. Clara worked as a nurse in the town's tiny hospital, which was just a three-block walk west on Via Dolorosa, but Erik's job was a lot less open and airy. There are rich seams of bituminous coal in the low hills encircling Havilah but the geology of the area was so jumbled there was no way to reach it by drilling a straight shaft. Prospectors had settled for extracting only natural gas, used to pump the aquifer. But Erik and a colorful Kuwapi fixture named Wawokiya Red Star made twisting tunnels through the hills. At the time no one knew how they managed the feat and the men themselves said nothing until the end. After Erik and Wakokiya pulled their overnight shift other men followed in their wake to reinforce the tunnels with timber and remove the newly-exposed coal. At the nadir of the Great Depression Havilah experienced an economic boom. Havilah black gold was piled in great heaps on piers in Chicago and San Francisco. #0J

[Terminal Cruise] - By 1934 the unemployed, unemployable Erik Zinter had a brand new brick red Ford Model 40 and he also completely paid off his modest home two blocks from the eastern edge of town. The happiness of the Zinter family abounded all the more when the Academy asked them to adopt a young orphan in their care, a girl named Remiel, who was nine years of age. Details were hazy but some Stiffnecks whispered that Remiel had been adopted twice, that the Apostle Joshua Lange and his wife Ariel had brought the girl to Havilah from an overseas mission and raised her from an early age. Any worries Erik and Clara might have had over young Samuel accepting an adoptive sister proved totally unfounded. OK

[Terminal Cruise] - In April of 1942 word arrived of Lt. Colonel James Doolittle's bold air raid on Tokyo after months of steady bad news following the attack of the Imperial Japanese Navy on Pearl Harbor. To celebrate, the Migdalel College Conservatory held a recital of patriotic John Philip Sousa marches at the Academy's music hall out on Tin Pan Alley, attended by half of the town of Havilah. The band opened with Hands Across The Sea. This was followed with Semper Fidelis, the official march of the U.S. Marine Corps. The Liberty Bell was light and playful, while El Capitan was flashy, a chance for the class to show off. The Stars and Stripes Forever was the emotional high point, prompting the crowd of attendees to come to their feet where they were seated. King Cotton was big and sweeping, with America rises energy. The Thunderer was bold and declarative. For the finale the class wrapped things up with Fairest of the Fair. #0L

[Terminal Cruise] - During the performance Remiel, twirling her majorette's baton, happened to dance near her brother's drum kit. Sammy said, "I don't see Mom or Dad out there," and it was true. Remiel searched all the faces in the audience and she didn't see them. For an encore the class tore into a cover of the Duke Ellington standard It Dont Mean A Thing (If It Aint Got That Swing) with Remiel soloing with earthy vocals that belied her youth and Cadence "Coyote Cub" Shybear excelling on sax. Many of the Stiffnecks were offended by this sudden insertion of the devil's own race music into their John Philip Sousa mood and got up to leave the music hall but the show was already over. The encore closed the evening on a high note but for the Zinter kids it didn't mean a damn thing if their own parents weren't even there. #OM

[Terminal Cruise] - Crossing between star systems is not a physical impossibility, like exceeding the speed of light, but the eerie silence of the cosmos in the radio band suggests civilizations are as rare as supernovae in our galaxy. If they attain the technology to leave their native planet without simultaneously destroying their own civilization with the same technology, there is nothing to prevent them from thoroughly colonizing their own system as far as the comet cloud at the periphery, but the yawning gap beyond has always stymied them. And humanity is fated to face the same barrier. This is not a judgment on the qualities of mankind or those other races, it is the natural outcome of the mathematical and physical realities that govern our universe. The natural laws that lead to the emergence of life are incompatible with the dream of a far-flung Galactic empire crossed in decadent comfort on the equivalent of ocean liners. #0N

[Terminal Cruise] - The only successful interstellar travelers are advanced machines capable of repairing and even replacing themselves with raw materials they find in planets, moons, and asteroids, and traveling between systems in time spans on the order not of decades or centuries but of millennia. These machines are immune to the ravages of deep time, and radiation has little effect on them. The creation of such machines are not beyond the capabilities of the seraphim, the alien races that have already colonized their own system, and many were developed as assistants or even as deliberately engineered successors. For those machines capable of replicating themselves the dynamic of descent with variation and natural selection imposes upon them. These are the ophanim, and they are themselves alive in a certain sense. Physical contact between the isolated civilizations of seraphim is mediated solely through the ophanim. #OO

[Terminal Cruise] - Over billions of years something akin to a theological imperative emerged, an impulse to foster the development of life to the highest level of civilization, that the Continuity might be enriched. But there is a universal consensus to nudge such life they find with minimal interference, lest the diversity the machines cherish with almost religious fervor be diminished. Such has been the case here on Earth as humans proceed toward the status of seraphim. Few suspect the existence of ophanim among us, nor the imperceptible actions they have taken throughout history to kindle our technological civilization. As civilization on Earth progressed the alien machines appeared at times in forms like quite bizarre, like a mobile tree, or a red dragon, or a the interlocked whirling wheels of an orrery . All of these mechanisms in any form are called ophanim, or thrones. #OP

[Terminal Cruise] - The majority of residents in Havilah are descendants of a group of German-American pacifists who fled Maryland during the Civil War when their cornfields became battlefield cemeteries and their meetinghouse became an abattoir. As they wintered over in Missouri during their 1865 migration a child among the settlers named Linda Bergin learned that some oxen were not so easily turned by the touch of a pole. They were called "stiff of neck" and this was the cause for many references in the Bible which referred to the children of Israel as a stiff-necked people. But the cherub Ariel told her such stubbornness was really a good thing if it was desired to move toward a single goal without turning to one side or the other, which was indeed the case. So little Linda took to calling the pilgrims "Stiffnecks" and it quickly caught on. To this day the Protestant white folk of Havilah, the ones who have not been driven off by the unearthly location itself, proudly call themselves Stiffnecks. #0Q

[Terminal Cruise] - Havilah is unique among the towns on the North American central plains outside of the reservations in that the native population stands at 21 percent. The Kuwapi band of Oglala Sioux have had a curiously close and fruitful relationship with House Hai vri and the white settlers who first settled in the area in 1866. This arrangement paid off as barbed wire began to proliferate and cause the bison to become nearly extinct. Town life in Havilah and the surrounding farms (both inside and outside the Dole impact system) allowed the Kuwapi people to avoid removing to the nearby Pine Ridge reservation just to survive. In the Lakota tongue Kuwapi means "The Cast Out Ones" or "The Ones Who Follow" but in Havilah they did not live up to their namesake. Most of the Stiffnecks remain blissfully unaware they are sharing their town with actual winged angels, yet there is not a child among the Kuwapi unaware they are living alongside White Buffalo Calf Woman (Ariel) and her kin. [Terminal Cruise] - Havilah has a telephone system that hasn't changed since the 1920s, with three operators working corded switchboards, and frankly the people of the town wouldn't have it any other way. These women are known by name to all of the townspeople, and most assume they are listening in on the phone conversations out of boredom more than anything else. There is no long distance operator. Communications in and out of Havilah take place solely over a telex system installed at Migdalel College that hasn't changed since World War II. Sometimes it not entirely clear whether the messages coming over Telex originate with actual human beings, an artificial intelligence, or God himself. Trains arrive on an irregular schedule, with a variety of locomotives, and the schedule known only to a narrow set of interested parties: the workmen who handle cargo, the townspeople with tickets to leave and the ones waiting for relatives to arrive. It seems not even the railroad serves as a clock in Havilah. #OS

The Rome campus is Sodales Exemplaris Divini (Companions of the Divine Example). The American campus is Migdalel College in Havilah. Midrashet ha-Nashim (מִדְרַשַׁת הַנָּשִׁים) exists at the Kibbutz Kfar Nishim on the east shore of Lake Kinneret, in Kursi (anciently Gadara, where the reported exorcism incident with the Gadarene swine took place). Academia Sodales Itineris

(Academy of the Companions of the Journey) is found in London. Classes are nine hours long, six days a week. Students partake of breakfast and lunch on campus. Nine years at the Academy is equivalent to twelve years of public education anywhere else. Many go on to enter apprenticeships in the various trades. Protestant, Catholic, and non-Christian Native American students in Havilah attend the first nine years for free. City property taxes assessed for education are non-existent. #OT

[Terminal Cruise] - Pope Gregory I identified Mary Magdalene as Luke's "woman in the city, which was a sinner" who anointed Jesus before his execution. That was an error. The gospel of John identified the woman with oil as Mary of Bethany, sister of Martha and Lazarus, and basically said Luke was full of it. Mary (Maryam, Maria, Mariamne) was the most common name for girls in 1st Century Galilee. Jesus frequently gave his friends and kinfolk punny names to tell the multiple Marys and Simons and Judahs and Jacobs apart. He called his leading female disciple Mary Magdalene, or Mary the Tower. Mary's loyalty to God was unshakable, like a tower, and she herself was a striking 5'11". Mary was responsible for baptizing the female followers of Jesus, for he attracted many women to the Way with his call for a more compassionate interpretation of Torah. Baptism involved brief nudity, immersion, and a change of raiment. In that time and place someone like Rocky performing this particular ritual simply would not do. #OU

A V chromosome is an X chromosome with active code in formerly non-coding segments. Nephilim (len) have a VY allosome pair and thus a male phenotype. Human men have an XY allosome pair, and human women have XX. In sum, there are five sexes in the thinly-disguised Angel Academy television universe. Ariel's body produces what could be termed 'designer pheromones' affecting animals; beasts eagerly comply with her will. Some say these airborne molecules have a similar effect on len and men. Ariel became known to the Lakota people as White Buffalo Calf Woman when she restored the bison herds after a tragic die-off in the 14th Century and introduced the seven ceremonies of the sacred pipe in celebration. Ariel frequently wears plain brown garments, as the white raiment affected by the other members of House Haivri would not do for her agricultural work. #0V

[Terminal Cruise] - Historians have long noted the reluctance of the FBI to even acknowledge the existence of a national organized crime syndicate until the discovery of the Apalachin meeting in 1957 forced their hand. Even then, federal efforts to reign in racketeering were perfunctory. It was subsequently revealed that the Bureau Chief, who compiled dirty laundry on lawmakers and cabinet members was himself the victim of blackmail. A film was supplied by Angel Academy in 1937 as insurance against any federal move against the Haivri "crime family". When DECON became a significant problem Michelle Haivri called in her marker and the Commission showed a copy of the film to the Chief. By that time the Marazano faction was re-organized as the Bonnano family. The film has never been seen by outsiders and probably remains a curious historical relic among LCN in New York, although it is of little practical value now with the Director dead and the culture of America shifted to render such a thing almost quaint. A private airplane pilot named Kenneth Arnold, who was aiding in the search for a downed US Marine cargo plane, saw the burning body armor of the falling angels as they dropped to Earth, and to a reporter he noted how they seemed to bounce in the air stream as they tumbled, "like saucers skipping over the surface of a pond." [Terminal Cruise] - Cadence "Wiiya Wiiya" Shybear (or Coyote Cub but he goes by Cubby) and a daughter of men named Ehawee Wicasa (Laughing Girl) were trying to find a place on the Migdalel College campus to make out. They discovered comfortable vehicles in the shape of a disk. Most of the volume of the craft was fuel tankage. The central core had a internal combustion engine and two counter-rotating propellers. Cubby summoned a halo to allow the propellers to provide sufficient lift on their limited thrust. If Ehawee tried to fly the thing alone it wouldn't get off the ground. Gabrielle had chosen to use a curious name for her new aircraft: Cubby and Ehawee stole a Dizzy Lizzy. They took a tour of the American southwest. There was an AM radio, but sometimes they had to descend and gas up. When they strayed close to Kirtland AAF base in New Mexico some P51 Mustangs shot them up. Cubby's leg was shattered by one round that passed clear through the hull and him. He barely got Ehawee and himself down alive. #OY

#AO Pilgrims 1:1 It came to pass in the second year of the Confederate War that I, Joshua, a deacon of the Lord of Hosts Fellowship and the son of a goodly farmer of some esteem by the name of John Lange, had received correspondence from one Ariel Haivri regarding a matter it seemed to me should be made known to the saints of the church without delay. With leave from Elder David Long, therefore, I undertook to read this epistle to all the holy brethren at the Price Meetinghouse following our mid-week evening prayers. The salutation of Ariel Haivri and the urgent communication are given here. 2 House Haivri to our fellow laborers in the vineyard of God Most High, though by the sorrows of Providence we are asundered by the tides of history, yet our hearts are knit together in the bonds of holy fraternity. Be it known unto you, dear neighbors, that upon the seventeenth day of the present month, the hosts of war shall

In faith and charity, your servants of the Way Restored. 7 The heralds of House Haivri claimed a lineage reaching unto the hoary recesses of antiquity, and were by no means unacquainted with the disregard of both commoner and crowned head, having endured such slights as a matter of course through unnumbered generations. 8 But a moiety took the prudent course of conveying their families and beasts to Williamsport. Though Ariel had dispatched letters of equal tenor to near a dozen congregations in the vicinity, it was the Lord of Hosts Fellowship alone that deigned to reply, divided though that body was within itself. The remainder maintained a silence that was as stony as it was predictable.

#A3 9 And it came to pass that the letter of Ariel did sharply divide the brethren, when I read it aloud before the faithful upon that Wednesday night. For Ariel did give the name of her people as Congregation Derekh Me'hudeshet; and this did trouble the minds of many among us. 10 For some held that they were not truly Christian, but rather heathen, or Jewish, or (God forbid) even Romish. And others did suspect a dark design, supposing that this offer of refuge was but a pretense whereby they might seize upon our beasts. 11 And there was also the matter of the portrait which Ariel had enclosed with the letter, whereby it was made known that the writer thereof was a woman. 12 And she was adorned in a brown cloak of feathers, which did appear most strange unto the simple farmers, and contrary, as they supposed, to the plain instruction of both Peter and of Paul in the holy scriptures. 13 And the likeness gave not the appearance of being hand-tinted, but in full lifelike color, even unto the smallest particular.

#A4 Pilgrims 2:1 And it came to pass, upon the afternoon of the seventeenth day of the same month I did receive the epistle of Ariel Haivri, that muskets were discharged in great number along two walls of stone, so that the sound thereof did run swiftly from man to man, and the smoke of the black powder did burn the eyes of those engaged. 2 And these walls did join unto a bridge of hewn stone, where oft believers were received in baptism. There many soldiers did converge in great tumult, coming on foot with much shouting. And at the first encounter the Federals did press forward with great force, and came near unto the far side of the stream; yet were they driven back again by the Rebels, with much violence. 3 And being under heavy fire, the men did fall back across the bridge, treading in reverse upon the bodies of the fallen, which did already lie one upon another. And some were dead, and others did yet writhe in great agony, having their bones broken or their bodies pierced through with balls of lead.

#A5 4 And among the fallen were men who had endured former battles, even such as that named after the Shiloh church, where the war did first rise unto a great height of slaughter. 5 And there was brought to bear a large gun loaded with canister, which was set to command the length of the bridge, and did sweep it from end to end, so that men were cut down as the grass before the scythe, and a second layer of the slain was laid upon the first. 6 And some of these likewise had been present at the great contest at Malvern Hill in Virginia, where the artillery had wrought terrible destruction. 7 And two guns, placed somewhat upstream, did cast forth bursting shells, whereby the gunners of the Union were sorely maimed; and another did fire solid shot with great effect, until the lone Federal piece was broken and reduced unto splinters and twisted iron. 8 And thereafter there came a counter-assault of the Rebel infantry; and they did swiftly regain much of the bridge, which had become as a place of slaughter.

#A6 9 And it came to pass that a certain God-fearing colonel among the Federals was struck by a ball; yet, to the great wonder of those about him, he did rise up again, for the ball had lodged within a small Bible which he habitually carried upon his person. 10 And this thing was taken by many as a token of divine favor; and the officer, being thus emboldened, did lead forth yet another charge against the enemy. 11 And the soldiers of both sides did stand upon the mounting heap of the slain, and did pass up loaded muskets one unto another, even as water is borne along in buckets to quench a fire, casting aside those which were spent. 12 But as the contest did endure, the Rebel infantry began to fail in their powder; and the colonel who commanded them did perceive that the bridge could no longer be held. 13 Wherefore he issued orders to withdraw his guns under the covering fire of fresh troops, who did stand fast in a rearguard action, that the others might retire in good order.

And having set his forces in array, he did order a certain lieutenant of his staff to ride unto the headquarters and make report that a foothold had been gained upon the left wing of the army at Henry Rohrbach's Bridge. 15 But the messenger, beholding how the bridge was heaped with the dead of both sides, did refuse to pass again over it, lest he should bring further dishonor upon the fallen. And he went down instead unto the stream, and did cross over on foot, avoiding the span of stone that had been made into a fearful abattoir. 16 And in this the officer suffered little hardship; for the water of the run was never more than waist deep, even as was well known among the farmers of all that country.

taken and made into a hospital for the tending of the wounded. And the walls within were stained with blood, and the light of day did enter in through many holes made by shot, casting beams across the suffering of the men. 2 And one physician did administer chloroform, that the wounded might be eased of their pain; and another did take up the saw, and remove the shattered limbs, casting them into a heap without. 3 And I entered the chapel, and saw the commander of the army did bend over maps of our town and of the encircling country, giving heed unto his dispositions. 4 And when the general beheld me, he was wroth, and did demand of me who I was. And I said unto him that I was a humble deacon of the church which now lay in desolation round about us. 5 But the officer gainsaid me, saying that the place was not now a house of worship, but rather the headquarters of the whole Federal army.

And the General did run forth from the building, plucking splinters from his flesh, and crying out orders; and the officers who had been idling upon the pews did scatter in haste, as shells burst round about them, and solid shot did strike the trees, shattering them at the trunk. 12 And the artillery of the Federals was brought up to answer the guns of the enemy; but I remained within the chapel, having a slender hope that by my presence the Lord might yet spare the building. Yet even as I prayed, the shot did tear great openings in the walls thereof; and two shells from the enemy's chief battery did burst above the roof. 13 And the sound of the guns did cease suddenly, in a manner not to be accounted for; and in the darkness and the dust I did cough, and was taken with a great and grievous pain. And as I lay in the dimness and in great suffering, I heard the voice of a woman.

And the woman came into view; and I saw that she was arrayed in raiment much like unto that of Ariel, having feathers of a red hue beneath a white coat furnished with many pockets. 18 And she said, You did well, Gabe. You were not here on the previous pass, so we cut through to him with Shaha Haruach, and not a few timbers shifted, and Joshua suffered immeasurably more.

You cannot feel it because the beam is compressing it. That will change when we lift it. 21 And I could do no more than gasp for help. And she said again, This will pain you considerably, to my great regret, but I see no way to avoid it. And I was tended with great care by those whom I did not know, who did entreat me to remain at rest long after I felt strength enough to rise. 2 And out of gratitude I did humbly obey; yet I could not put from my mind the brethren, and how they must needs be troubled at the absence of their deacon, for I had gone missing in the midst of the battle. 3 And a woman clothed in garments of green did come unto me, and she made herself known as Vretiel, the sister of Ariel. And she said, Are you now well, Joshua? 4 And I answered, Yea, I am made whole; yet would I feel the better if I were permitted to rise from this bed. And she said, Joshua, I pray you, do so; for I would introduce you unto another who is with us, who came hither in like manner as thou didst, though under the threat of fire rather than battle.

For the invading army returneth across the river, and soon shall the army of the United States depart from thy lands. And my sister shall return with thy livestock, even as she hath spoken. 16 And Vretiel did smile gently, and reached beneath her chair, and brought forth a roll of canvas, which she placed in my hands. And she said, This is a map for thee. It shall guide thee and thy people unto the place where ye shall make your new home. And I shall be there awaiting you, and Jashen Shy Bear shall be with me. 17 And I did unroll the canvas to behold it; and I saw thereon rivers, and forests, and hills, yet they were without names, and there were no lines to mark the
